

Afghan women lined up for Ireland in 2027

THE Afghanistan refugee women's team could visit Ireland in 2027. That country's contracted female players, who fled after the Taliban returned to power in 2021, announced yesterday that they will tour England and Scotland this summer.

'We had a chat with people who help co-ordinate the Afghan Women's team,' said Cricket Ireland communications manager Craig Easdown. 'Their schedule for this trip is full this summer, as they are apparently going to Scotland after the England part.

By GER SIGGINS

'We've been told that they'll look at next summer re Ireland, and they were extremely appreciative of our interest.'

The Taliban instituted a sweeping program of gender discrimination, including a ban on women's sport. Many resettled in Australia, where they have resumed playing cricket and lobbied for opportunities. The England and Wales Cricket Board has now invited them to play a series of games and they will also be guests at the Women's T20 World Cup final at Lord's on July 5.

The Afghanistan men's team are scheduled to play a five-match series in Belfast and Bready in August, despite protests and calls for a boycott which are expected to increase as the tour approaches.

Cricket Ireland chief executive Sarah Keane said in March that she felt 'moral discomfort' at the decision to invite Afghanistan but said 'if we don't [play the series] the issue kind of goes away'.
