The scheme consists of a new multi-purpose deepwater port terminal on Foynes Island (Foynes Island Deepwater Port), designed to facilitate enhanced port capacity in line with projected port growth and port operations for the designated Tier 1 Port of Foynes, which will include the provision of new container terminal operations and a large open space to serve as an assembly and pre-commissioning base for the deployment and maintenance of offshore wind turbines and associated offshore large scale plant and equipment which is integral to offshore renewable energy projects. The Scheme of Development will comprise the following:

The new quay will measure circa 700m long by 60m wide. The deep-water terminal is approximately 4.2 hectares in area including the reclamation of approximately 12.5 hectares of foreshore as a hard-standing area.

- (2) Construction of a new road and bridge connecting the proposed deepwater port terminal at Foynes Island to the existing Port of Foynes at Durnish, Foynes, Co. Limerick. This will consist of:
 - (i). Construction of a circa 650m long x 14.8m wide bridge structure connecting the south-east part of Foynes Island to the existing port estate on the mainland and,
 - (ii). Construction of a new port access road across the southern part of Foynes Island from the new bridge landing point on Foynes Island to the planned deepwater port terminal. The total length of this new road (including bridge) from the existing road on the mainland to the edge of the proposed hardstanding adjoining the proposed deepwater port terminal is 2,253m; and
 - (iii). Temporary construction works.

The bridge works will cover a total area of approx. 1.38 hectares, and once constructed, the bridge (supports) will occupy 0.96 hectares of the Maritime Area.

- (3) Associated site-investigation works, site-development and temporary works including capital dredging in an area to the northeast of the new deepwater port terminal to a minimum depth of -17mCD to facilitate the new deepwater berth with an estimated dredge volume of approximately 45,000m3 over a maritime area of approx. 1.5 hectares.
