

Housing target not high enough say councillors

Laois County Council has easily exceeded its target to supply more social housing, but councillors say that target was set too low.

The local authority was given a national Housing For All target back in 2022 to build a total of 534 new houses by 2026. That includes houses built by Approved Housing Bodies, like Clúid.

Less than halfway through 2025, and they have shot past that target, Laois County Council CEO Michael Rainey confirmed at the May council meeting.

"To date we have delivered 669 homes. So already far in excess of our target set by Government.

"We have another 387 social houses under construction in 2025. That is a significant number for any county to show. So again this county is exceeding the Government targets.

"Looking at Affordable Housing, we have a target of 38 units by the end of 2026 and we have already completed sales of 34 units with a further 25 coming through. There is a positive and ambitious attitude of this council across all the housing numbers. At the end of the day, this comes down to putting a roof over people's heads. 21 secured houses in April, that's a great number. I congratulate everybody involved," Mr Rainey said.

He wasn't allowed too much congratulations however.

"It's great to be over it, but the target should be higher," said Cllr James Kelly.

"I agree, we are well above our targets but they're far too low," said Cllr Caroline Dwane Stanley. She asks when the council will build any four bedroom social homes, and also asks if any new programmes are coming offering Affordable Homes.

"For those people earning above €35,000 we don't seem to have anything. For people whose relationships end or a young couple above the income limits, they can't get a home," she said.

Cllr Aisling Moran also wants a higher target to aim for.

"We are one of the best in the country, but like James said, the targets are not high enough, but we are doing brilliant," she said.

There are indeed higher targets on the way, confirmed Director of Services Angela McEvoy.

"A revision has been approved by the Government and we are just awaiting confirmation on that. Our activity over the past few years has been to progress that, and we await the targets to be set. Either way we're looking to prepare for growth. We just have to ensure that we align with the figures.

"Obviously it has to be in appropriate locations where services exist," Ms McEvoy added.

The Government is amending the National Planning Framework to increase its housing target to 50,500 per year to meet the population growth shown in the 2022 Census.

Seven Kilminchy areas going under council wing

Another big chunk of a huge Laois celtic tiger housing estate is being taken in charge by Laois County Council, but some parts still remain the responsibility of developers.

The Laois local authority plans to shortly take in charge seven more sections of Kilminchy housing estate in Portlaoise.

They intend to take on responsibility for roads, services, paths and streetlights, serving properties in Lake Drive Mews, Lake Drive, Lake Glade, Lake Crescent, Lake Grove, Lake Vale and Lake Gardens.

Director of Services Simon Walton confirmed the progress at the May meeting of Portlaoise Municipal District.

"There are a number of other areas but there is development ongoing adjacent to them, so it would be premature to take those areas in charge," Mr Walton explained.

The council is taking submissions regarding their declaration, up until Thursday, June 18. A report on any submissions made will then be given at the next full council meeting on June 30.

Kilminchy estate on the Dublin Road was built in the Celtic Tiger era, by multiple different private developers. With more houses now being built, it will have close to 800 houses and apartments, as well as a nursing home, retail and restaurant area, amenity lakes and a public Portlaoise town bus stop. A playground was planned but never built.

Other areas in the massive estate are already taken in charge. They include Lake Edge and Lakeside Gardens, Lake Avenue, 24 homes in Lake Drive, 11 homes in Lake Way, Lime Tree Avenue, 14 homes in Kilminchy Avenue, 11 in Kilminchy Close and 11 in Kilminchy Place.
