Dear Sir,

Busconnects was out-of-date before it was published. Post-covid it's a relic. It will succeed only in destroying Upper Baggot St, one of the few corners of the city that has escaped the fatal attention of planners.

The Newton Plan, based on common sense and real life experience, has a hope of improving Dublin's traffic - Busconnects has none. If Busconnects was merely ineffectual, it would not be so objectionable. The worst thing about Busconnects is that it is so expensive.

There are cheaper ways to destroy a neighbourhood. Just call out the army and have them march from Stephens Green to Ballsbridge armed with flamethrowers and molotov cocktails. Unlike the NTA, they'll get the job done in an afternoon.

Regards,

Aidan Harte
